

Do You Know Someone Who is Being Abused?

A Guide for Family and Friends

How Do I Know?

Domestic violence is not “an isolated incident,” “a lovers’ quarrel” or “a private family matter.” It is a pattern of coercive and controlling behaviors that one person in an intimate relationship uses against another. Every relationship has ups and downs, but domestic violence includes repeated behaviors with the aim of coercion and control. People who use violence try to control aspects of a partner’s life through fear, threats, manipulation, and other tactics. Sometimes—but not always—people use physical and/or sexual violence as a way to dominate an intimate partner.

Examples of Abuse Include:

Verbal

- Belittling
- Insulting
- Name-calling
- Threatening to hurt or kill
- Yelling

Emotional

- Accusing
- Blaming
- Criticizing friends and family
- Intimidating
- Isolating

Sexual

- Pressuring or forcing sexual acts
- Wanting sex after abuse

Physical

- Choking/strangling
- Hurting or killing pets
- Kicking
- Punching
- Pushing/shoving
- Slapping

Financial

- Controlling or withholding money
- Not allowing someone to seek medical care or counseling
- Not providing adequate support for children
- Running up debt or destroying credit

Someone May Be Experiencing Violence in Their Relationship If They:

- Stop seeing friends and family members, or become more isolated
- Often cancel plans at the last minute
- Are quiet when their partner is around and seem afraid to make their partner angry
- Casually mention the violent behavior, but say it's "not a big deal"
- Have unexplained injuries or offer explanations that do not quite make sense

Someone May Be Using Violence Against Their Partner If They:

- Talk badly about their partner in front of the children, interfere with their parenting, or threaten to take the children if they leave
- Control their partner's finances, behavior, and social life
- Become violent quickly, striking, or breaking objects
- Act jealous of others who pay attention to their partner
- Minimize or deny behaviors, or blame their partner for the abuse

Believe your friend or loved one when they tell you they are experiencing violence.

Why Do They Stay?

Seeing your friend or loved one mistreated can make you feel very frustrated, not only at the person who is violent, but also at the loved one for not leaving. There are many reasons that a person decides to return to or stay in an abusive relationship. People often:

- Fear for their lives and are terrified that their partner will become more violent if they leave. In fact, the most dangerous time for a person is when they try to leave.
- Have limited financial resources to break away and believe they cannot make it on their own.
- Believe the situation is their fault.
- Fear that their partner will get custody of the children.

A person experiencing violence may want the violence to end, but not the relationship. People who abuse are not violent all the time. They often can come across charming and romantic in between episodes of violence.

Children Living in a Violent Home

You may notice that children act out, are frequently upset, or are very quiet and withdrawn. People who use violence often undermine their partner’s parenting, as well as the relationship between their partner and children.

WRAP services are FREE
and
CONFIDENTIAL

What Can I Do?

Most importantly, encourage your friend or loved one to develop a safety plan with a domestic violence advocate. Connect with WRAP by calling 800-273-8712 to speak with an advocate. Safety planning is a free service, and calls are confidential.

Do...

- Ask specific questions about the abuse
- Listen without judging
- Tell them that they are not alone and help is available
- Trust your loved one's knowledge
- Highlight their strengths and courage
- Learn about and offer community resources
- Provide information on domestic violence
- Contact police immediately ONLY if you witness or hear a violent episode. DO NOT try to intervene.

Don't...

- Criticize their partner
- Make choices for them
- Sound angry or upset
- Suggest couples counseling, it can be dangerous
- Use terms such as "victim" and "abuser"

When the Person Experiencing Violence Feels Ready to Leave

If a person experiencing violence decides to leave, they may need money, help finding a place to live, somewhere to store their belongings, or transportation to a safe place. Decide if you feel comfortable helping in these ways. A person may leave and return to their partner multiple times before leaving for good. It is important to respect their judgment and timeline for leaving. Try to think of each time as them moving closer to freedom. WRAP advocates are here to help.

If the Person Experiencing Violence Does Not Want to Leave

You can help by providing emotional support to build their self-esteem. Let the person experiencing violence know:

"I'm sorry this has happened to you." "You don't deserve that." "You are an amazing person."

When you focus on their specific strengths and abilities, your encouraging words begin to diffuse their partner's hurtful and degrading comments, enabling them to feel stronger.

WRAP supports survivors in 19 West TN counties:

- Advocates located throughout our 19 county area are here to listen, offer resources, information and advocacy
- 24/7 crisis line
- Assistance with filing orders of protection and connection to other legal assistance
- Safety planning
- Safe homes and emergency safe refuge
- Relocation assistance
- Therapeutic support

End Violence. Change Lives. Give Hope.

The information in this guide was adapted from material created by the Ohio Domestic Violence Network (ODVN).

Trust
Your
Instinct
To Help!

1-800-273-8712

support@wraptn.org

www.wraptn.org

Facebook: wrapwesttn

Remember!

It takes patience to support a person experiencing domestic violence. Don't forget to reach out for support for yourself. The WRAP hotline is there for you, too.